REX Electric & Technologies acquires Integrisys, a leading provider of commercial and residential audio/visual integration systems

Chicago, IL – June 24, 2013 – REX Electric & Technologies, LLC, a leading provider of electrical and technology services today announced that it is expanding its capabilities in high-end commercial and residential audio/visual systems with the acquisition of Integrisys, a design/build technology company serving clients nationwide. In addition to the Integrisys team, principals Brad Weintraub, George Velazquez and Eric Wolfram, will join REX's Chicago office on July 1, 2013. This acquisition makes the company one of Chicago's largest full-service electrical and complete technology solutions providers.

“REX has a long history of meeting the electrical and technology needs of our clients, and we are delighted to welcome the Integrisys team to our company,” said Dominic M. Sergi, REX Chairman and CEO. “Adding to our existing expertise in audio/visual systems is a natural extension of the services we provide to our general contractor and building management clients,” Sergi said.

“Brad, George and Eric are among the best known A/V systems experts in the industry and they, along with their engineers, designers, project managers and other team members who also will be joining us, add significant depth to REX's Technology Division, which we continue to grow,” Sergi noted. He added that REX's Technology Division provides state-of-the-art voice data, security, audio visual and other technology systems to a wide variety of clients.

Weintraub, who co-founded Integrisys with Velazquez and Wolfram in 2004, said, “We are pleased to be merging with such an industry leader. We have been fortunate to work with REX Electric & Technologies over the past several years and have gotten to know their management team. Because Rex is so widely known for its quality of craftsmanship, excellent safety record and ability to help their clients achieve their goals, we can think of no better merger partner.”

According to Velazquez, “Our clients in the commercial, educational, residential and technology sectors will be well served by our merger.” He added that both firms have been recognized as leaders in providing innovative solutions for their clients.

REX Electric & Technologies, LLC is a leading electrical and technology contractor, serving general contractors, end-user businesses of all types and residential clients with all types of electrical services. REX office and field staff work in close partnership with clients who range from start-ups to Fortune 1000 companies – to deliver excellent craftsmanship, outstanding service and safety and exceptional value.
